RMGO's TV Ad exposes John Morse calling his constituents TOXIC

Rocky Mountain Gun Owners (RMGO) launched a TV ad buy today in Colorado Springs, Colorado, exposing Senate President John Morse's support for gun control and his disgraceful comment calling citizen input into the legislative process "toxic".

RMGO's 60-second TV ad illustrates Senator Morse's anti-gun leadership and urges Colorado Springs residents to call Morse and demand he stand up for Colorado's gun owners, not East Coast liberals.

"RMGO will not stand on the sidelines and let John Morse get a pass on his anti-freedom, anti-gun agenda during the last session of the legislature," said Dudley Brown, Executive Vice President of Rocky Mountain Gun Owners. "John Morse is more interested in taking marching orders from Michael Bloomberg than the input of the people of Colorado Springs."
